Code of Conduct

Northstar Demo Services | Fictional sample policy | Version 1.0

1. Purpose and Expected Behaviour

This sample code of conduct describes expected workplace behaviour at fictional company Northstar Demo Services. Employees are expected to act respectfully, honestly, and professionally.

2. Respectful Workplace

Employees should communicate respectfully, avoid harassment and discrimination, and raise workplace concerns through an appropriate manager or designated reporting channel.

Retaliation against a person who raises a concern in good faith is not permitted under this fictional code.

3. Confidentiality and Data Handling

Employees should access confidential information only when needed for their work and should not disclose it to unauthorized people.

Passwords, API keys, and access tokens must be kept private. Suspected loss, misuse, or disclosure of confidential information should be reported promptly to the designated security contact.

4. Conflicts of Interest

A conflict of interest may occur when a personal, financial, or outside-work interest could improperly influence work decisions. Employees should disclose a potential conflict to their manager or the designated ethics contact as soon as practical.

Employees should not make purchasing, hiring, or vendor-selection decisions where their personal interests could compromise impartiality without first disclosing the conflict and following the company's review process.

5. Gifts and Use of Company Resources

Employees should not accept gifts that could reasonably be seen as influencing a business decision. When unsure, they should ask their manager or ethics contact before accepting the gift.

Company equipment and accounts should primarily be used for authorized work and handled responsibly.

6. Reporting and Review

Concerns may be reported to a manager or the designated reporting channel. This fictional document does not provide actual contact details or promise a particular investigation outcome.
